

WALL SAVER IN $250,000 FIRE TOWN

Thrilling rescue of entire families were made by firemen and policemen early today at a mysterious fire which wiped out the big mercantile plant of A. B. Hoffman & Co., No. 48 Boston street, Lynn, where scores of men, women and children were at the time of the catastrophe, and would have been killed had it not been for the heroic battle of the firemen and the quick action of the police.

The fire, which broke out at 10:15, was caused by a gas stove in the kitchen. The flames spread rapidly, and the firemen were called to the scene. The firemen worked for two hours, and the fire was finally extinguished. The damage was estimated at $250,000. The firemen and policemen were praised for their heroic actions.

PORT JERVIS, N. Y., Aug. 11.—Seven families, including the Sumner family, the Sullivan family, and the Sullivan family, were killed today in a fire which broke out at 10:15, and destroyed the big mercantile plant of A. B. Hoffman & Co., No. 48 Boston street, Lynn, where scores of men, women and children were at the time of the catastrophe, and would have been killed had it not been for the heroic battle of the firemen and the quick action of the police.

Thousands of New Yorkers, guests at the hotel, helped the town fight the fire. The firemen and policemen were praised for their heroic actions. The damage was estimated at $250,000. The firemen and policemen were praised for their heroic actions.

GERMAN'S REAL CAUSE OF WAR GAME

Major-General Leonard Wood, U. S. A., in his opinion of the great war game which began in Massachusetts yesterday morning with 20,000 regular and militia soldiers in action, today gave out a remarkable interview in which he declared that Germany's known readiness to invade our peaceful country at a few hours' notice caused our war games to be ordered by our government just here on the Atlantic coast. General Wood, who is in New York, declares that the war games will be held to improve our military defensive work, in which he admits that "it is a military fact" that Germany has a superior army and navy. "SANTA CLAUS LADY" SUICIDE

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 11.—Miss Eliza Phillips, known as the "Santa Claus lady" because of her organization of the Santa Claus Association, which brought the real cheer of Christmas to thousands of poor children, committed suicide today.

THE young woman, living at No. 1221 Walnut street, had had a long and bitter struggle with the municipal authorities over her charitable work. It is believed she became discouraged in the war she was waging against the social evil and that this discouragement indirectly prompted her taking her own life.

Miss Phillips was a vigorous worker for the poor and the unfortunate. She was known for her kind and generous nature, and her work was highly respected by the community.

BOSTON AMERICANS DOUBLED

The Fault Is Yours if You Miss Success

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Do you ever enter a ball or and find it crowded from the center to the outer plumes and a strap, if not a waist, waited at the upper end?

Did you ever try to make your way to that upper end of the ball? Then you know how, like a million of people, you will stand in your way and refuse to let you pass, however you may indicate your desire to do so.

If you finally decide and ask them to permit you to go up where there is more room, they glare at you as if you had offered a personal insult, and grudgingly give way.

But when you are in such a situation there is only one of two things to do. You must make your way past those human obstacles, or you must stay down at the crowded and uncomfortable end of the vehicle.

Life Is Like Such a Car

There is always a crowd at the rear end of a "congested car" and it is not to be used as a comfortable place which awaits a climber. You are falling to develop powers of perseverance in yourself and you are overhauling selfishness and indifference to have their way.

Thousands of people are going through the uncomfortable and crowded conditions of the car, and they are pushing forward to the vacant places.

If you are not comfortable in the place you occupy, don't sit at the rear of all where the fault lies.

Perhaps you think that "Car Company" has not supplied you a place, but first ask if there is not room at the rear end of it. If there is, push ahead and see it.

Thousands fear to push on.

You are adding to the crowded condition of a "congested car" and failing to use a comfortable place which awaits a climber. You are falling to develop powers of perseverance in yourself and you are overhauling selfishness and indifference to have their way.

"If I Were You"

By JESSIE POPE.

HE: "If I were you I would not seem so proud, aloof and chilly to one whom all adore."

It is but to do your will. If I were you I would not seem so proudly disdainful. To me as sensitive as you, it's really rather painful.

SHE: "If I were you I would not say 'As sensitive as me'."

It gives your ignorance away for all the world to see. If I were you I would not wear my previous time in words.

With nearly duties to be faced I would be up and doing.

HE: "If I were you I'd give some hope."

Of life in days to come. Then with adventure I would cope.

And march with life and drum. A chance of glory I'll not miss. But ere I find or make one.

If I were you I'd start a class.

SHE: "If I were you I'd take one."

SQUIRE JONES became so interested in watching the mercury that he forgot how hot it was. Told the Squire that the thermometer had risen twenty degrees since morning, but only gained two and a half degrees.

If the Squire's calculations are correct, can you tell the highest possible mark the thermometer could have registered during a twenty degree rise of mercury?

One hundred forty degrees would be awarded among those who send best answers to Puzzle Editor, in care of this paper.

Your Unknown Goddess Who Is She, and Where Is She? By Nell Brinkley

Sunk in the tapestry depths of your chair, you've called up little feminine wraiths, trying to fit them to your imaginings of your goddess to be

YOUNG woman! that's all! Where in all the great green world is the girl you're going to marry, and who is she?

Sunk into the tapestry depths of your old chair, with the moon on you, you've followed the idle, lazy wraiths of smoke that float and unfurl into the gloom beyond your chair, and called up little feminine wraiths out of that corner of the room where it's blackest.

"Maybe I've seen you—swung past you on the very street and saw your eyes and hair in the sun—and didn't know! Didn't."

"Maybe I know you now and laugh with you every day, wild, unthinking, never getting a little idea in my head to look well into your eyes, to find the thing that is there for me and a color I never knew."

"Maybe you're down street in a little house I pass, and maybe you're in a toy town in the depths of the Swiss mountains, a little town that hangs to the slopes of a mountain."

"Maybe you are nineteen and round and plump, with a great mop of floppy golden hair, and a pretty waist, and a warm heart, and gray eyes; feminine, tender and teasing."

"Maybe you are just this minute—ten, and impatient and self-willed, with tremendous eyes, and bobbing curls with a whopping hair net, and a voice like when the teacher rules your class with a knife, with long just lounging out and as thin as reeds, just a little bundle of 'go!'"

"Maybe you're a widow—and you're thinking of me now!"

"And maybe—maybe, oh, goddess—you're on all fours yet, and your nose is a ball of dough and you have not any hair, and you wear frocks with only three buttons in the back, and you haven't any sense of propriety yet, and you first with any man that will lift the dimples in your face."

Picnics Give Zest and Go to Summer Joys

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Do you like picnics? I do! I love everything about a picnic. My friends tell me it is a mild mania with me. Anyway, mania or not, ever since I was a tiny girl I have loved to eat out of doors.

I remember my mother telling me that whenever they could not find me they went straight to the garden, and there, in the sunny garden, my yellow head was always to be seen—a state of affairs that usually produced much activity on my mother's part and considerable disturbance in my own little insides.

But to return to the picnic question, do you like picnics and do you know how to give them?

If you make too much fuss and ceremony over a picnic you destroy half its pleasure.

Don't bother to carry a lot of dishes; wrap everything daintily in tissue paper and have plenty of paper table napkins, and you won't need any dishes excepting a few drinking glasses.

Of course you must take hard-boiled eggs—who ever heard of a picnic without hard-boiled eggs?—one for each person, and one or two extra for luck.

Adopt Picnic Manners. Some people imagine that a picnic is an affair with no manners, and for them you must lay in a supply. A lot of ear-dishes mixed with the juice of a lemon and washed in water will wash the plates of sandwiches. The bread must be eaten, for the charm of a sandwich lies in its softness. And a few jam sandwiches—cold—raspberry and strawberry jam will make the best.

Cold chicken and ham cut in slices, as that they can be eaten with the fingers. Don't murmur at the lack of luxuries to eat with your fingers. I know it is, but picnic manners are not so formal as other manners. A few ripe bananas, to be eaten whole, with paper and salt, will add to the picnic.

The above list, with cake and fruit, will make a feast fit for anybody.

A bottle of iced tea mixed with lemon juice makes a delightful picnic beverage. After the picnic is over you will have nothing but the drinking glasses to carry home.

Get the Habit. Be careful about when your picnic companions are. The unseasonable, complaining spirit can spoil the day for every one. I like to picnic in the shade of the trees and grass and a log to sit on, and I don't want the picnic to be spoiled by the sun.

There is one thing that all picnickers should remember, and that is to be kind to the birds. Do not throw away any of the bird's food, and do not throw away any of the bird's food.

When you think this is a lot of talk about eating out of doors, but eating out of doors at this season is healthy, happy and fun. It is a simple matter to make a picnic of the picnic and to enjoy it better, more wholesome form of summer amusement. Get the habit.

When I turn 'mid the gibes of my friends; When days of my freedom are numbered And the life of the bachelor ends."

This is now the national dish—the dish of the millions. To try them once means to use them forever. No other beans can compare with them.

You have worked 48 years to perfect this dish, and it's worth it.
Beans are Nature's choicest food—84% nutriment. Their food value is greater than meat, yet they cost but a third as much.
When beans were baked in the old way, people ate them, hardly once a week. Baked in the new way, they've become a daily dish.
But don't think that all ready-baked beans are alike. Don't get some commonplace brand.
Van Camp's are unique. If you will once compare them with other beans you will see why the world demands them.
